I recently hired Mr. Bennett to assist me with a Character and Fitness matter before the Texas Board of Law Examiners. I received a preliminary determination letter that I lacked the requisite moral character to practice law in Texas - a frightening moment for any law student that has spent years to finally become a licensed attorney. At first, I hesitated to seek guidance or assistance from an attorney, as I thought I could handle a hearing and the entire process on my own. I did extensive research into my situation and what I could expect regarding the process, as well as into attorney's who have experience in these kinds of matters. Mr. Bennett was by far the most qualified attorney I discovered and looking back, I now know that I absolutely made the right decision in deciding to hire Mr. Bennett. The process is long, stressful, and more burdensome than you may think - hiring an attorney is in your best interest, and I would highly recommend Mr. Bennett to any law student who may find themselves in such a predicament as mine. For those worried about finances, know that Mr. Bennett was extremely flexible with me regarding payment, and even allowed me to pay an extremely reasonable flat fee over a period of months. Throughout the entire process, Mr. Bennett's guidance was nothing short of highly professional, and his guidance and support eased my stress and anxiety regarding the entire process as I studied for the Texas bar exam. When it came time for my hearing, I was prepared and as calm as I could be due to Mr. Bennett's familiarity with the process and guidance in preparing for potential questions he anticipated. In the end, Mr. Bennett achieved a complete win for me, as my application was approved and my negative preliminary character determination dismissed. After going through the entire process, I could not imagine doing it alone, without the guidance and support of an experienced attorney like Mr. Bennett. Regardless of the seriousness of your character or fitness issues, I highly recommend hiring Mr. Bennett to assist you with your matter.
