

Don't make the mistake of facing the BLE alone.

When I first received my BLE preliminary determination letter I found myself in an indescribable panic. It felt as though everything I had worked so hard for was flashing before my eyes. I called several attorneys and all made me even more anxious---partially because they demanded an outrageous amount of money I knew I wouldn't be able to come up with but also because they made my situation sound doomed from the get go. Thankfully, Mr. Bennett returned my call the very next day and without ever discussing money, he walked me through everything I could expect to have happen. He did this again in person, before ever discussing money, and that's when I realized he genuinely cared. Almost three months later, having already successfully presented my case before the BLE Board, I remain confident that Mr. Bennett was the best decision I made in this process because he's not only incredibly experienced, but he really cared about the outcome of my situation. Even if you think you have an easy case that's sure to be dismissed, don't make the mistake of trying to be both your key witness and advocate. The stress of defending yourself before the board only heightens as the date approaches and you need somebody on your team like Mr. Bennett that has countless years of experience and a relationship with the board you are presenting before.
